Houthi Missiles Target Riyadh for a Second Straight Day

- Saudi air defences intercepted three Houthi cruise missiles launched toward the Riyadh region on Wednesday, November 11, 2026, for the second consecutive day, the Saudi-led coalition said, Reuters reported. — Reuters
- The coalition's account of Wednesday's wider barrage also included two drones aimed at Mecca and southern areas and two missiles launched toward Saudi Arabia's west, Reuters reported. — Reuters
- Houthi spokesman Yahya Saree denied targeting Mecca, said Houthi operations target oil facilities and military bases, and claimed an attack on a pumping station at Yanbu, a claim Saudi Arabia has not confirmed, Reuters reported. — Reuters
- Wednesday's interceptions followed Tuesday's, when Saudi air defences intercepted a ballistic missile and a cruise missile launched in the same Houthi campaign, Reuters reported. — Reuters

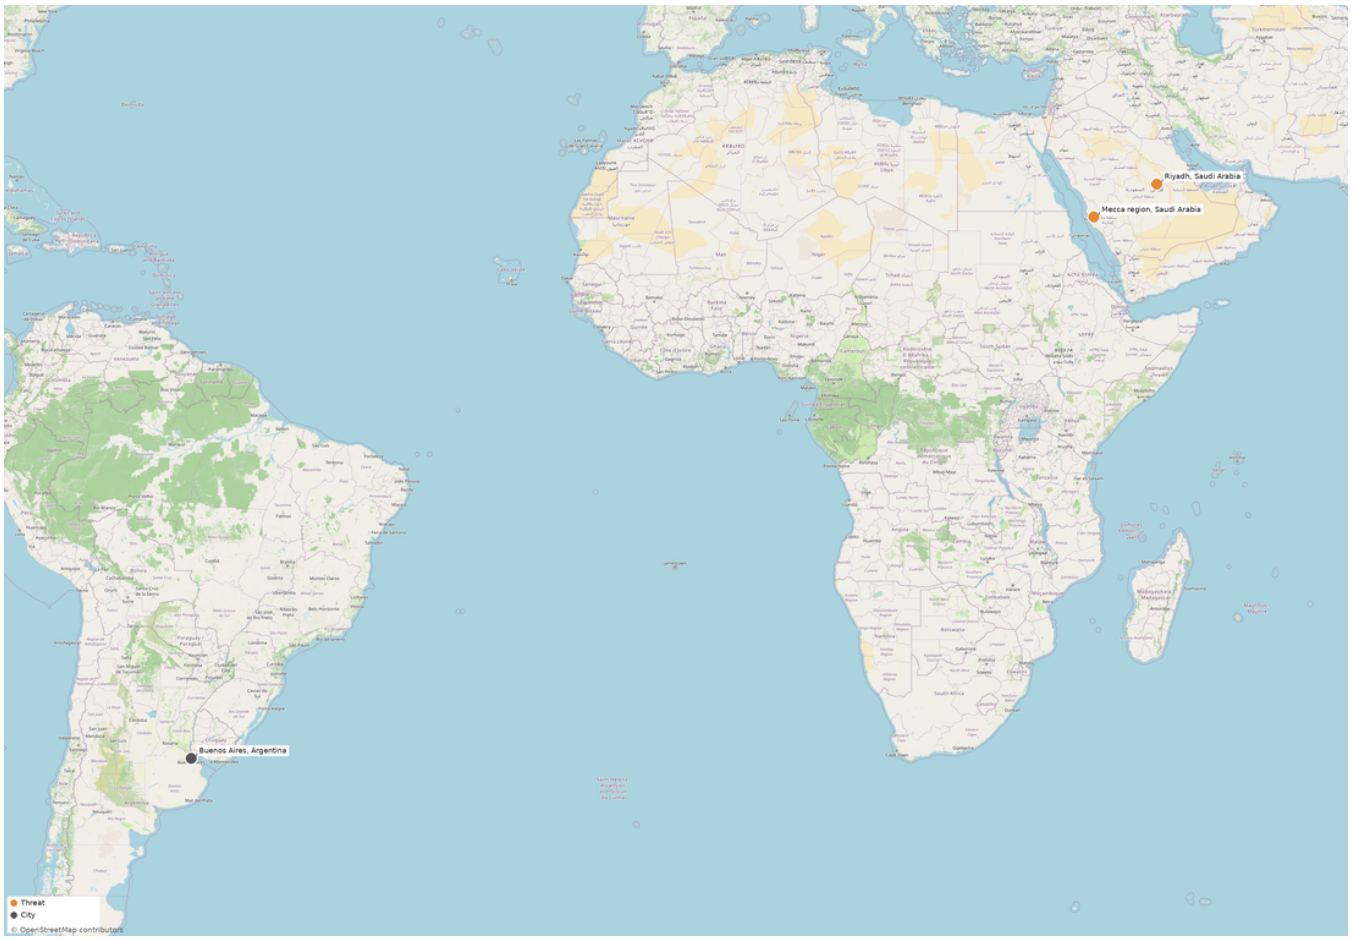

Debris From Intercepted Ballistic Missiles Falls Across the Mecca Region

- Debris from two ballistic missiles launched by Yemen's Houthis and intercepted by Saudi air defences fell in several locations in the Mecca region on Wednesday, including Sabuhah village, Saudi Arabia's civil defence said early on Thursday, November 12, Reuters reported. — Reuters
- The civil defence condemned the targeting of civilian objects as a violation of international humanitarian law, and the Houthis had yet to comment on the latest incident, Reuters reported. — Reuters
- The Houthis have denied targeting Mecca and Medina, so the intent behind the latest launches remains contested; the interception and debris facts rest on Saudi statements carried by Reuters. — Reuters

Argentina Categorically Rejects Iran's Terrorist Designation of Its Navy and Air Force

- Argentina's foreign ministry on Wednesday, November 11 categorically rejected Iran's designation of its navy and air force as terrorist organisations, calling the measure completely baseless and an unacceptable accusation, Reuters reported. — Reuters
